CONSIDERATIONS on the State of the British Trade, &c.

From Tuesday, July 13. to Thursday, July 15. 1714.

IT has not only been the Complaint of a Party among us, that the French Trade is ruinous to us, but we have a general Complaint that all our Trade is lost, sunk, decay'd, and the like. The Mercator cannot enter into a Scheme of all our Trade, and describe what it is to the several Countries; but taking the general Exportation of Goods, especially of our own Growth and Colonies, which is the same thing the Mercator presents here an Account of but Days Trade, and this not by Chance, but the immediate Days before the Writing this Paper; and let any impartial Eye observe whether this is the Export of a City or of a Country that wants Trade, and whether we ought not to be punished from Heaven with a want of Trade, who can have the Face to complain under such Circumstances?

An Account of the Exportations in the Port of London in Eight Days, from the First of July to the Twelfth, being but Ten Custom-House-Days.

From the Custom-House, &c.
